Lymphology meets scar therapy

Dear colleagues and friends of lymphology,

The impact of the coronavirus pandemic on our professional, social and private lives is omnipresent. It does not shy away from in-service training courses either, which is why our Lymphology Symposium, planned for mid-2020, needed to be postponed to 2021.

Lymphology is a subject with many peripheral areas. It demands expertise from different medical disciplines. That is why medical experts as well as therapists and care specialists from these subject areas are always included in our training courses so that you can be up-to-date with the latest treatment options for your patients.

This year, we want to examine the aspects of soft tissue scarring and its impact on the development, progression and, most of all, treatment of lymphoedema: scars that develop, for example, after trauma, caused by surgical tissue defects or as a radioderm from radiation treatment in cases of oncological conditions and are connected with lymphoedema.

I am therefore pleased to announce the 11th Munich Lymphology Symposium.

Kind regards,
Dr. med. Michaela Knestele
